East Tennessee Relief Society.

It is important that the events and occurrences in East Tennessee connected with the war, should be faithfully recorded and preserved. In view of this fact the Executive Committee of the East Tennessee Relief Association have decided to do what they can towards that end. All citizens who have shared in any scenes or transactions of special interest growing out of the war and located in Tennessee, or who have been personal observers of such instances, are, therefore, requested to put their recollections in writing and transmit their narratives to the Society for safe keeping. All communications should be accompanied by a responsible name and be addressed to John M. Fleming, Esq., Secretary or to either member of the Executive Committee.

From the Knoxville Whig, April 23, 1864.

It will be seen by reference to another column that the East Tennessee Relief Society proposed through its Executive Committee, to become a lecturer and depository of manuscript narratives having reference to the troubles in this part of the country during the last three years. It is plain and desirable that such a work should be done, while occurrences of the war are yet fresh in the mind of their witnesses and while they who have acted and suffered in interesting and memorable scenes, survive. And as there is no Historical Society of this part of the country, whose office it is to collect and preserve such narratives, there is an obvious propriety in the Relief Society undertaking this duty, although it was not a part of its original purpose, and is not strictly within its sphere.
